"This book represents only four years of the work of New Jersey's best photographers - 2000 through 2003. But this collection manages to tap into many of those same emotions that spring from the best photographs of American history. Here, there is the joy of celebrating a millennium, the horrific fire and ash of Sept. 11, the quiet fortitude of victims of the Seton Hall dormitory fire fighting for a new life, the somber strength of fire fighters hoisting Old Glory amid the ruins of the twin towers. In these pages, you will meet "Digital Man," "Daddy's Girl," and "On-line Santa." You will go to fight night in Paterson, a cranberry harvest, protests, funerals, and fires.

If you are like me, you will find yourself stopping, here and there amid these pages. Perhaps you will cry at some photographs, smile at others. Maybe you will feel anger, admiration, astonishment at how life unfolds and how people continue to endure. But if you are lucky, you will remember. That's what these photographs do best. They stop life's moments, then find a place for those moments on our memory."
